

UNDENIABLE ATROCITIES: REACTIONS

"This is the most crushing critique to date of the war against drugs waged by Calderon and Peña Nieto since the end of 2007."

Jorge G. Castañeda (Former Foreign Minister of Mexico, 2000-2003)
Atrocidades Innegables, Milenio, June 9, 2016

With this [report] we should launch a big debate in Mexico about precisely these themes that deal with undeniable atrocities, of crimes that might be classed as crimes against humanity.

Carmen Aristegui
CNN Espanol, Aristegui, June 10, 2016

"I began reading this report wondering if we are really dealing with crimes against humanity. After reading the report, after reading this immense amount of information that it contains and the sustained argument, I became convinced that yes, we are facing crimes against humanity."

Mariclaire Acosta (Former Undersecretary for Human Rights, Mexico)
Program Espiral, Once TV, June 8, 2016

"[A] devastating report...As this document makes quite clear, the problem is not only violence and criminal acts, but rather, above all, the remarkable inability of the federal and state governments to investigate, try and punish those responsible for the violence."

Carlos Puig (Journalist)
...Y Peña se volvió Calderón, Milenio, June 9, 2016

A rigorously-executed work....For the first time we have an wide-ranging report on the crisis of human rights in Mexico, through the lens of International Criminal Law.

Jacobo Dayán (Journalist)
Crimines contra la humanidad en México, Aristegui Noticias, June 7, 2016

The Open Society [Justice Initiative] and the five Mexican CSOs have delivered a devastating report, yet one that is accurate and fair. Let us use it, government and society together, to find concrete ways of putting an end to our undeniable atrocities.

Sergio Aguayo (Journalist)

Trump y Soros, Reforma, June 8, 2016